InspireShift: Panellist

From Crisis to Opportunity: The Pandemic 3 years on

Mary Stiasny started her career as a secondary school teacher and then worked in Schools of Education in different universities in the UK, training secondary school teachers. She has also worked to develop international and global links and spent some time as Director of Education at the British Council.

Mary has held middle and senior management roles in several universities, and she has worked on consultancy projects and research projects in the field of international learning and teaching.

Before moving to her current role at the University of London Pro Vice-Chancellor (International, Teaching and Learning), Mary held a strategic role as Pro-Director with responsibility for Learning, Teaching and International at UCL's Institute of Education.

Professor Mary Stiasny OBE BSc MA(Ed) PhD University of London

Pro Vice-Chancellor (International, Teaching and Learning)

