

Transcultural Leadership

Subject Area	Personal Effectiveness
Subject	Making an Impact
Delivery	Face to Face or Virtual
Length	1 Day

Overview

Modern leadership development has been dominated by western and eurocentric models of academic thought and research. This has created a biased and narrow perspective on the concept and principles of leadership and its subsequent development.

As the impact of exponential change continues to create uncertainty and complexity the need for agile, adapting, fluid and sophisticated leadership has never been greater.

This workshop opens the transcultural dimensions of leadership introducing leadership philosophies and approaches from around the world. It will provide participants the opportunity to understand and apply leadership thinking from Africa, the Middle East and East Asia.

Who is this for?

Senior managers and leaders working with complexity and uncertainty wanting a different approach to key challenges.

Key learning components

- Understanding and exploring leadership as a transcultural concept
- Introduction to and increasing understanding of leadership approaches from Africa, Middle East and East Asia
- Applying transcultural leadership to current key leadership challenges
